The concept of virtual manufacturing has been developed in order to increase the industrial performances, being one of the most efficient ways of reducing the manufacturing times and improving the quality of the products. Numerical simulation of metal forming processes, as a component of the virtual manufacturing process, has a very important contribution to the reduction of the lead time. The finite element method is currently the most widely used numerical procedure for simulating sheet metal forming processes. The accuracy of the simulation programs used in industry is influenced by the constitutive models and the forming limit curves models incorporated in their structure. From the above discussion, we can distinguish a very strong connection between virtual manufacturing as a general concept, finite element method as a numerical analysis instrument and constitutive laws, as well as forming limit curves as a specificity of the sheet metal forming processes. Consequently, the material themselves at the mercy of a murderer in an isolated and snowbound hotel.

The grounds are beautiful and it's fun
