With over 500 pages and for a very reasonable price of 5 dollars, 'Song of the Fairy Queen' was beautifully written, had a smooth flowing theme with well developed plots and sub plots and few typos. I would have been well pleased if it had been further developed to the Trilogy stage as my enjoyment would have run to a couple of weeks at least.

The Fairy-Queen - Wikipedia

And I serve the Fairy Queen, To dew her orbs upon the green;
The cowslips tall her pensioners be; In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours; In those freckles live their savours;
I must go seek some dewdrops here, And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

With only his High Marshal, Morgan, and a handful of Morgan's men at his back, he has only one direction left to run...up. And only one ally to whom he can turn. Kyriay, the Queen of the Fairy.

Based on Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream and reproduced from an early authoritative score, this work features all the fine qualities of this great English composer □ wonderful invention, keen dramatic instinct, and lively characterizations.

Poised to become the most powerful priestess in Idara, Nelay doesn't have time to become a pretty bauble for the king. She's too busy saving her people from the invading army sweeping across her kingdom. But in defeat after defeat, Nelay begins to realize a bigger power is at play than that wielded by mere mortals. Only she can stand between the cinders of her once-great nation and the vengeance of a goddess. If she fails, the remnants of her kingdom will turn to ash.
